

Dr Holly Robertson

Deputy Principal Educational Psychologist

What's important to me...

- Keeping children at the heart.
- Collaborating effectively with families and professionals.
- Values-led practice.
- A well-connected team that fosters relationships and belonging.
- Promoting an environment where people feel seen and heard.
- Placing psychology at the forefront.
- Ongoing growth and development.

Colleagues have noticed that...

- As a leader, I champion authenticity, equity, autonomy, and individualism.
- I prioritise people and embrace a collectivist mindset, fostering collaboration and shared success.
- I display curiosity and courage, embracing uncertainty as opportunity for learning.

About me...

As Deputy Principal, I help lead the educational psychology service and strategic initiatives.

I am committed to creatively applying psychology to maximise accessibility and impact for the communities we serve. I enjoy working systemically to find innovative solutions, strengthen processes and harness positive outcomes.

My interests include community psychology, team learning, supervision, and organisational change. I am also passionate about intercepting cycles of disadvantage through evidence-based psychological approaches.

How best to support me...

Please share your lived experience with me, as your feedback will help us continuously enhance our services.

I value opportunities for face-to-face communication and connection whenever possible.

Email: holly.robertson@suffolk.gov.uk